River Floating:

Put-In Access: Public put-in access is available at the Sullivan Bridge via Sullivan Bridge Road, located approximately 13 miles north of Valier, on undeveloped BLM property.

Take-Out Access: The public take-out is located at Williamson Park, 1.2 miles downstream from the I-15 Bridge.

What to Expect: The Marias River is a Class I river, suitable for beginners its entire length during normal river flows. The upper Marias River is slow moving and typically becomes too low to float beginning mid to late July. Canoes and kayaks are the recommended watercraft. Rafts can also be used but often result in slow progress and long days on the water.

River Flows: Very little information on minimum, optimum, and maximum river flows is available for reliable and safe floating for the upper Marias River. Optimum flows below Tiber Reservoir have been estimated to be between 700 and 1500 cubic feet per second (cfs), with flows below 500 cfs estimated to be too low to float. FWP will be gathering additional information relating to optimum flows during the next few years. River flow for the upper Marias River is available on-line at: <http://waterdata.usgs.gov/nwis/uv?06099500>.
